...at Sears it's a tradition For nearly a century it's been our goal not only to introduce new products, but to continually improve and perfect existing ones.
It's a tradition that's produced products like the Kenmore Electric Vacuum (1938), Master-Mixed Flat Paint (1953), Coldspot Frost-free
Refrigerator (1960), PERMA-PREST Apparel (1965), and the Telecaption Adapter (1980).
And, as you'll see throughout this catalog,
the tradition continues...

Introducing a Tent that won't give you cabin fever even in the rain

Family Dome Tent with unique fly design that forms awnings over door and windows

$169⁹⁹

You want a sport tent. You need a cabin tent. So compromise—have it both ways! First, note the base. It's square for more square footage than a hexagonal base tent of the same size—more square feet lets you store more without that "cramped" feeling dome tents traditionally have. Next, notice the generous curves of the fly, protecting, not obscuring the windows and door. That means you'll get ventilation and view. High-count nylon taffeta fabric is light, strong and breathable. The shock-corded aluminum and fiber glass frame sets up quickly. Oh, yes, it sleeps up to five adults with room to spare in its ample 9x12-ft. 9-in. area with 6-ft. 2-in. center height. To see more tents, check pages 558 thru 561.
